SYDNEY TARGET OF JAPANESE MIDGET SUBS

At Least 3 Small Jap Craft Believed Sunk in Australian Harbor.

By The Associated Press

SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA, June 1—Japanese midget submarines, apparently launched from a mother ship off the Australian coast, slipped into famous Sydney harbor last night to be greeted by a thunder of gunfire and depth charges which probably sank three of the tiny craft and thus started damage to vital shipping.

The only achievement of the midget raiders, believed similar to the midget undersea craft which figured in the attack on Pearl Harbor last Dec. 7, was the sinking of an old steamer used as a ferry.

The raid, however, carried the war to southern Australia for the first time and gave the residents of Sydney an exciting night punctuated by the sounds of heavy gunfire.

The submarines presumably slipped through a narrow shipping lane in the mile-wide harbor entrance. They were spotted at about 11 p. m. and two sudden gunshots from allied defense batteries touched off a veritable inferno.

One searchlight picked up the periscope and upper portion of the conning tower of one submarine, which was believed sent to the bottom by gunfire.

Two other submersibles, allied headquarters said, were believed sunk by depth charges loosed by allied naval vessels which combed the bay in all directions.

Twenty-one passengers aboard a ferry crossing the harbor when the gunfire broke out had grandstand seats for the show.

Allied Air Raids Blast Jap Bases

By The Associated Press

Successful allied air raids on Japanese island bases facing Australia and valiant Chinese efforts to check Japan's Chekiang province offensive were reported today as the major developments in the Far Pacific war.

The allied air forces based on Australian soil started large fires and wrecked docks and airdromes at enemy lodgements in Timor, northeastern New Guinea and the Solomon islands, General MacArthur's headquarters reported.

In China, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's fighters were engaged in a wide-flung diversionary action in Anhwei province, in an effort to offset a Japanese offensive which had overun Kinhwa, capital of neighboring Chekiang province, and nearby Lanchi.

Meanwhile the Japanese landed fresh forces to the southeast on Yuhwan island, off the Chekiang shore.

The Chinese were able to recapture certain points behind the Japanese Chekiang line, but the tide of battle was still generally with the enemy.

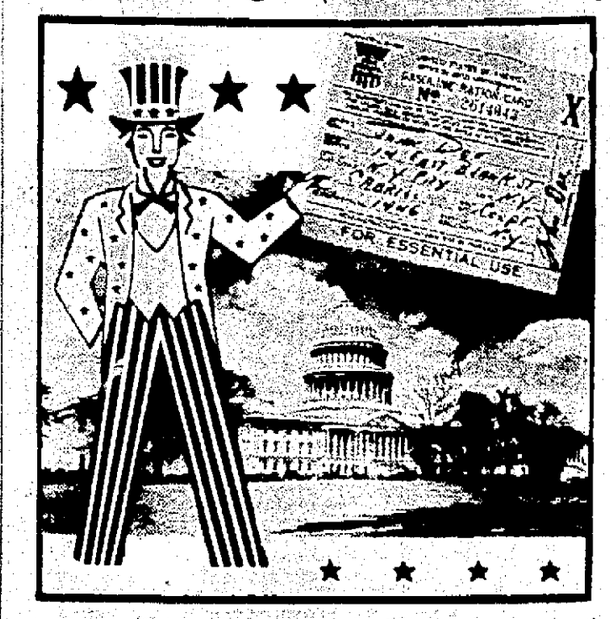
Gallup Poll Discloses Many Not Sure Gasoline Rationing Is Necessary



Much confusion exists in the minds of motorists concerning the gasoline ration situation, a Gallup Poll finds. A third are not convinced that rationing is necessary, an even higher proportion believe that the distribution of ration cards has been unfair, and seven in every ten see no reason why congressmen should have "X" cards allowing them unlimited use of gasoline.

By GEORGE GALLUP

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

PRINCETON, N. J., June 1.—Before gasoline rationing is extended throughout the country there is clear evidence of an urgent need for fuller explanation to the public of the reasons which make rationing necessary.

In a study by the Institute of first reactions to the rationing program which went into effect in the eastern states, these facts come to light:

Dr. Gallup.

1. A full third of the people in the rationed areas are not convinced that rationing is necessary. Some even think it was put into effect merely to make the country "war conscious."

2. An even larger proportion—nearly four in every ten—believe that the distribution of ration cards giving some people more gasoline than others has not been fair.

3. Approximately seven in every ten see no reason why congressmen should have "X" cards allowing them unlimited use of gasoline.

All these facts were revealed in discussions with a cross-section of the population throughout the rationed area. The interviews brought out the fact that while there is no unwillingness on the part of the motoring public to accept sacrifices, confusion exists in the minds of many about the gasoline situation. There is also evidence that any rationing program which is not preceded by a campaign to give full details leads to misunderstanding and criticism.

Many of the confusions will undoubtedly be resolved by the Office of Price Administration after the trial ration period ends July 1 and rationing is possibly extended to the rest of the country.

At present, however, many motorists criticize the program on the grounds that it did not call for a sufficient investigation of each particular driver's case, and did not give sufficient explanation to the public as to why one man should receive a "B" card and another man an "A" card.

Misunderstandings are particularly apparent in relation to the "X" cards granted to congressmen. Regardless of the merits of the arguments pro and con, it is clear from the survey that when OPA decided to allow this group unlimited use of gasoline, it failed to give the country satisfactory reasons for doing so.

Here are a number of statements couched in the exact language used by people interviewed in the rationed area. They typify the attitude of those who complain about the situation:

"Some people got cards they didn't deserve . . . There are too many 'X' cards . . . Too many loopholes in the set-up. . . . Any good story will get you a 'B' card. . . . Everyone is putting on commercial plates to get a better ration rating . . . Too much discrimination and favoritism. . . . Some people who have influence get more gasoline than they need.

"While lots of people got 'B' cards I have a mother in the hospital and can't get enough gasoline to go and see her . . . Rationing ought to be nation-wide or it's no use. . . . Too much cheating in the whole program. . . . At certain stations you can get all the gasoline you want. . . . The whole thing is just another scare like the Ickes gasoline shortage last summer."

According to Washington observers the rationing program was adopted because of the loss and transfer of oil tankers which formerly supplied the east with most of its gasoline, and because the government wants to cut down on civilian driving in order to conserve rubber.

A recent Institute survey showed that even if gasoline were as plentiful as water and could be transported to all sections, some sort of rationing would be necessary if for no other reason than to save the nation's tires.

More than half of the 26,000,000 car-owning families, the survey showed, have tires which will only last them a year or less at the present rate of driving.

The Truman Committee of the senate reported this week, after months of studying the problem, that the average motorist could not hope to see new rubber for his tires for at least three years. There is some talk of newly-invented substitute material for tires, but such plans have not yet materialized.

AMERICAN AID TO BE GIVEN RAF SHORTLY

Gigantic Aerial Campaign Is Launched Against Nazis with Great Success.

By The Associated Press

A superlative aerial campaign to weaken Germany for a knockout invasion from the west, perhaps this summer, has been launched with tremendous success by the British amid prospects of direct and imminent American aid to multiply the destructive effort.

At least temporary stalemate in a broad sense in the battle of Russia on Germany's east, reverses for the cause of the Nations in China and the uneasy balance between belligerents in the Australian war zone could not dim the glowing offensive spirit among the United Nations.

Reports from the Libyan front, indicating a decisive land victory for the British, fanned this spirit.

Axis armored forces, erstwhile attackers, were said to have gone on the defensive.

There may be a sharp relationship between the turn of warfare on that North African front and the 6,000,000 pounds of bombs dropped by the RAF in the 80-minute raid on the Rhineland Saturday night.

For a knockout of axis forces in Libya might open the way to invasion of Italy—a second European front against Hitler.

Offensive Spirit Grows

And so the offensive spirit glowed among the allies against Hitlerism though no one could say that dark days were ended.

It burned with the brightness of the incendiary bombs with which more than 1,000 planes touched off the Saturday night holocaust at Cologne, Germany's fifth city, in the greatest air operation of history. At least 1,250 planes, counting the bombers' supporting aircraft, participated in this mission of destruction to the Rhineland.

Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, head of the United States air forces, in enthusiastic congratulations to the RAF command said "our air forces hope very soon to fly and fight beside them (the RAF) in these decisive blows against our common enemy."

Air Marshal A. T. Harris, chief of the RAF bomber command, responded, "we, too, look forward to the time now so near when the United States army air force, which already so gallantly and effectively share their (the RAF's) burden in the Far East and elsewhere, commence operation at our side in this theater of war."

Now In London

Significantly, Arnold, who is in London with Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell, chief of the United States army supply service, and Rear Admiral John H. Towers, chief of the United States navy bureau of aeronautics, announced he had "practically completed" talks with the British on developing "the maximum impact of our combined air strength."

He called the RAF's Cologne attack "a wonderful show" and said that the sooner American forces take their place at the side of the RAF "the better it will be . . . no combat planes are being kept back in the United States

Rents Come Down Today in Industrial Centers

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 1—It was rent reduction day today for thousands of residents in 20 population centers.

The government, through the office of administration, ordered the reductions into effect in areas in which some 9,000,000 persons live.

There were no exact figures available on how many tenants will get cuts in rentals but it was regarded as certain that in the near future similar procedure would be ordered for others of the nearly 400 "defense-rental" areas now designated.

Under the order effective today rent prices had to be cut back in 14 areas to the levels prevailing April 1, 1941; in four others the rents of Jan. 1, 1941 will govern; and in Cleveland and Wichita, Kans., the rates must be reduced to those of July 1, 1941.

The areas with the April 1, 1941 maximum include these in Ohio: Akron, Canton, Ravenna, and Youngstown-Warren.

British Envoy Tells Class To Defend Faith and Break Evil Nazi Madness.

By The Associated Press

DELAWARE, O., June 1—Lord Halifax, British ambassador to the United States, asserted today that "if we are to break this evil madness now loose in Nazi Germany, the conviction with which we defend our faith must be as deep and as passionate as that with which our enemies would destroy it."

"There was a time when people used to say that it was of small importance what people believed; that questions of dogmas were at best an effete mental exercise, and at worst a positive hindrance to true religion," he said in an address prepared for Ohio Wesleyan university's centennial commencement. The class included 238.

"We can judge today how shallow and dangerous such talk was," he continued. "For with the example of Nazi Germany before our eyes we cannot doubt that what a man believes matters more than anything."

Hitler Is The State

In Germany, the ambassador said, "the state, in the person of Hitler, is the sole and final judge of right and wrong. Religion may only be tolerated if it consents to be the servant of the state.

"To the worship of this new God, Hitler by appeal to many of its highest qualities, has perverted the young mind of Germany; and of all his crimes this always seems to me the greatest. Just as Napoleon harnessed to his own ambition the nobler instincts of the French revolution, so Hitler, with greater means and greater lack of scruple, has seduced the German youth, and in so doing, created what will surely be the greatest of our post-war problems."

Lord Halifax told graduates who might soon be called to the armed services that the quality of their resolution to defend the Christian principles for which the nation stands would be the most powerful "of all the resources at our command."

The University presented Lord Halifax with an honorary doctorate of humanities. Eighteen other honorary degrees were bestowed.

Notable Graduates

From Ohio Wesleyan's first 97 graduating classes, 90 college presidents and 14 Methodist bishops have come.

The baccalaureate sermon was given on Sunday by Dr. Ralph W. Sockman, a native of Knox county now pastor of Christ Methodist church, New York City.

Lord Halifax arrived in Columbus this morning for a whirlwind round of activities in central Ohio, beginning with breakfast at Governor Bricker's mansion and ending with the annual Columbus Chamber of Commerce dinner tonight in the Neil House.

Marion Soldier Listed Missing In Philippines

Mr. and Mrs. George Eyre of 174 Barnhart street have been informed by the adjutant general's office in Washington that their son, Pvt. George Robert Eyre, was reported as "missing in action" following the final fall of the Philippines.

The adjutant general's office reported on Jan. 7 that Pvt. Eyre had been wounded in action. He was the first Marion youth wounded in action.

The official notification failed to give Pvt. Eyre's last location but Mrs. Eyre said today that he was believed to be at Clark Field, near Manila, when reported wounded.

He was a surveyor with a division of engineers assigned to work of laying roads through Philippine jungleslands when last heard from.

He enlisted about a year ago and was assigned to the engineers corps. At the time of his induction he was a senior in civil engineering at Salt Lake university, Salt Lake City, Utah. He graduated from Harding High school in 1933 and attended Hiram college, Hiram, Ohio, for two years.

The adjutant general's office informed the family that if Pvt. Eyre was among soldiers taken prisoner by the Japanese, they will be informed as soon as lists have been exchanged through a clearing house established in Geneva, Switzerland. The letter further stated that prisoners are usually exchanged man for man.

EXPERTS SAY RAIDS TO KNOCK OUT GERMANY

Fifth Largest Nazi City In Ruins as 1,250 Planes Range Ruhr Valley.

By The Associated Press

LONDON, June 1 — Germany can be knocked out of the war by fall, crushed by huge fleets of American and British bombers, air experts predicted today as the German city of Cologne lay in flaming ruins under the most devastating air raid in history.

When the RAF sent more than 1,000 bombers with the greatest weight of steel and explosive ever borne on wings into the Rhineland Saturday night, these sources declared, its fliers heralded not only an eventual invasion of Hitler's Europe but also the systematic destruction of his war machine, city by city, factory by factory.

The RAF continued its offensive against the Nazis in daylight today with flights of fighters active over northern France, apparently concentrating on the Calais area.

Of such magnitude was the Cologne raid that only a masterwork of organization, with the bombers swarming over their targets at six-second intervals, made it possible.

Its paralyzing might was told in astronomical figures:

Of three-fourths of Cologne afire and under a three-mile-high pall of smoke.

Raid Lasts 90 Minutes

Of more than 1,000 bombers roaring over their German targets in Cologne, and elsewhere in the Rhineland and the Ruhr valley in a 90-minute procession of death and destruction;

Of perhaps 1,250 planes in all, including the bombers' protective fighter escort, in the greatest aerial armada ever put into the skies at one time;

Of 6,000,000 pounds of bombs dropped;

Of twice the number of planes and four times the weight of explosive and incendiary bombs that ever were dumped on Britain in a single night, even at the height of the German air assaults.

Of 6,000 airman in a single, intricately coordinated air attack;

Of 100,000 men in a ground crews at home sending the planes off from scores of bases.

Even the Germans admitted the "great damage" to Cologne, their fifth largest city, although the Berlin radio scoffed at the British announcement of the scope of the attack, quoting Nazi military sources as saying only "about 70" planes took part.

The British said their losses were 44 planes, picked off by 500 anti-aircraft guns and many night fighter squadrons.

Loss Is Low

On the basis of British reports that the RAF used 1,250 planes in all, this was a loss of less than four per cent—compared with the 10 per cent generally mentioned as the maximum losses which still would mark a raid as a success.

Cologne is an important manufacturing center, of 768,000 population, a great Rhine river port and the hub of rail lines connecting Germany and France.

Though one ponderous blow virtually had flattened this great German city, the raid's signifi-

U. S. Air Chief's Mission in London Nearly Completed

By The Associated Press

LONDON, June 1—Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, head of the United States air forces, announced today he had "practically completed conferences with British leaders aimed at developing "the maximum impact of our combined air strength" on Germany.

Arnold, who arrived in Britain last week, declared:

"It is obvious no offensive against Nazi-occupied Europe can succeed without air superiority and we mean to have it."

He spoke at his first press conference since his arrival.

He praised Saturday night's mammoth raid by the RAF on Cologne as "a wonderful show" and said the sooner American planes could take their place side by side with the RAF on similar raids "the better it will be."

The general avoided questions regarding when the United States flyers would be flying from the British Isles, saying: "I hope the first you hear about it will be when they arrive."

He said the American air force in Europe would be a balanced unit of fighters, bombers and all other types of planes.

"In gaining air superiority in any theater," he went on, "we haven't time to wait for ideal airdromes, ideal aircraft or ideal conditions.

"It has been agreed that the best results will be achieved if American crews fly in American planes as American units except when emergency conditions dictate another course.

"Allocation of aircraft is being arranged with this principle in mind."

The chief consideration of our conversations has been to insure that increasing demands of American units on United Nations aircraft production do not impair the British air offensive now or in the future, I believe a mutually satisfactory balance has been struck.

"We are determined to get every possible fighting plane into the fight," he continued.

"No [illegible] kept back in the United States

MARION SOLDIER WRITES SONG HIT

George Bailey One of Co-Authors of Army Ballad.

George Bailey, son of Mr and Mrs. Walter C Bailey of 305 North Main street, recently commissioned a second lieutenant upon completion of training at the Quartermaster Officers school at Camp Lee, Va., has collaborated in writing a ballad of army life which is described as one of the most apt and sincere songs of the war, according to a news report from Steubenville, where he was an attorney prior to entering the armed forces several months ago.

The song, "This Is My Prayer," was first heard nationally the evening of May 12 when Freddie Martin's band played it over a coast-to-coast broadcast from the Waldorf-Astoria of New York City. It is now popular in the Camp Lee training school.

Lieutenant Bailey and Lieutenant Walter Schumann of Hollywood, Calif., were the composers. The former Marion man, a novice in the field of music, wrote the lyrics.

Schumann was owner of the Schumann Music Publishing Co., with offices in New York, Chicago and Hollywood before he entered service. Previously he had been choral director for Andre Kostelanetz and before that associate director for RKO pictures.

The story of the song is that of a soldier overseas and of the thoughts of the war and those he left behind.

More for Your Money in Funeral Service

Because Hughes Funeral Service is personally managed it has a much lower overhead (cost of doing business) than is customary. This fact was shown by an independent audit of our books. And that saving is being reflected in lower charges. If service were being sacrificed in the interest of low cost there would be no gain. But the personal service offered, our air conditioned Funeral Home with the Everett Organ and complete equipment are the equal of any in the city.

That probably is why so many are showing preference for this funeral service. People get more for their money here.

Work Is Started Today on City's First Girl Scout Victory Garden

Half of Products Will Be Given to City Hospital and the 25 Gardeners Will Share Other Half.

Busy days are ahead for some 25 busy members of Troop No. 8, Girl Scouts, of the Oakland Heights school, who today started work on the city's first Girl Scout Victory garden. The project is sponsored by the service bureau of the Girl Scout Council.

A lot 48x125 feet on the west side of Henry street south of Bellefontaine avenue, donated by Miss Margaret Ammann, is being used for the project and the work will be done by the scouts. Half of the summer's harvest will be donated to the City hospital and the other half will be divided among the 25 girls. Some of the funds used to purchase the seeds were taken from the troop treasury and had been earned by the girls, and they have received some donations.

What to plant was given consideration and the girls conferred with Mrs. Mary Taylor, superintendent of the City hospital as to what the hospital could benefit most from. The list includes tomatoes, corn, radishes, carrots, lettuce and beets. A living beauty to the picture will be a border of flowers around the entire garden, each girl donating the seed and caring for her particular section.

Victory gardens are a part of a nationwide Girl Scout movement. Troop No. 8, which is one of the younger troops of the city, is made up of girls ranging in age from 10 to 14 years.

Final plans for the garden were made at a meeting of the leaders, troop committee and representatives with the Council service Bureau of which Miss Ruth Kramer is chairman, Thursday night at the Girl Scout Little House. Troop leaders are Mrs. Edwin Price and Mrs. Burnette Beare and serving on the troop committee are Mrs. Freda Duckworth, Mrs. Helen Yazel and Mrs. Cowell Midlam. Representatives of the troop were Marjorie Middleton, Lola Mary Barnett, Carol Lou Darling and Roberta Yazel.

UNFAIR TO LOVE

CHAPTER 16

"Hello, Stranger"

KATHLEEN gave Uncle Frank a quick kiss. "It's going to be wonderful!" she said. "You play-acting most at the farm. The perfect country gentleman, entertaining at his country estate."

Uncle Frank chuckled. "Country gentleman, my eye!" he said. "But, go on—have a good time. Nothing like a healthy imagination."

He got out of the car and hurried into a nearby office building. Kathleen, smiling happily to herself, was just about to release the brake and drive off, when Joe came up.

"Hello, stranger!" he greeted.

"Hello," said Kathleen. "It's your fault if I'm a stranger."

"Gosh, honey, don't tell me you are still touchy!"

"Of course not" Kathleen opened the roadster door. "Can I drop you anywhere?"

"No, thanks," said Joe. "But you can come over to the drugstore and have a soda with me. Mind?"

"Of course not," Kathleen said. "A soda will be fine—after all my work out at the farm."

"What farm?"

"Uncle Frank's. We're going to have a barbecue a week from Sunday — and guests for overnight."

"Well, well," said Joe. "Do tell!"

"Will you be free then?" Kathleen asked.

"Meaning I'm to be invited?"

"Naturally. I'd certainly not leave out an old friend."

"Sure, I'm free. Tell me about it."

Kathleen did so—but not until they found a table in the dim coolness of the corner drugstore.

"Uncle Frank's going to have a barbecue for the theater people," Kathleen began.

"His idea?" said Joe.

"And mine," said Kathleen.

"I thought so," Joe shrugged. "But go on."

"The barbecue will be late Sunday afternoon — after we've all had a swim in the pond," Kathleen explained. "Then we're having people stay over-night. There will be several town people out to the barbecue, of course — but our over-night guests will be the theatrical people mostly."

"I see," said Joe. "Impress them, so to speak."

"Put it that way, if you wish," said Kathleen calmly. "I'm asking Fred, Paul, Ruby, and Daisy. I'm going to ask Mrs. Buxton."

"Why? To supply an air of respectability-"

"Perhaps. Anyway, it'll make eight of us—four couples."

"Am I invited for over-night?"

"Yes."

"Do I get paired off with Mrs. Buxton?"

"If you wish. Or there'll be Ruby and Daisy."

"You, I suppose will be tied up with Paul or Fred."

"Part of the time, yes."

Slick Party

Joe was thoughtful, slowly sipping his drink through a straw. "It sounds like a pretty slick party," he said. "I'll be tickled to come Ruby and I can discuss some touch spots in the play."

"Haven't you been up to read it to her yet?" Kathleen wanted to know.

"Not yet. I've been waiting until I had the thing polished up more. And, boy have I been working! That's one reason I've neglected you—if neglected is really the word! I've given every spare moment to re-writing." Joe grinned. "I haven't even had time to make another placard for picketing."

Just before they got up to leave the drugstore, Joe laid his hand over Kathleen's.

"Listen, Kathleen," he said, "how about seeing the show with me tonight?"

"But I thought you had already been at—Monday night," Kathleen said. "To write the review, I mean."

"No, I skipped Monday and last night," Joe said. "I've been too busy with my own play. Anyway, it doesn't matter, since I've got plenty of time to get the review ready for our next issue." He leaned across the table. "I would be fun seeing the show with you, honey."

"All right," Kathleen said. "What time will you be out for me?"

"Around eight," said Joe. "That will give us time to reach the barn for the curtain."

Kathleen pushed back her chair. "I've got to hurry on now, Joe," she said. "I've endless things to do. I didn't realize the old farmhouse was in such a state of neglect. I've got to unpack a lot of curtains and bedding to take out for the over-night party."

"By the way," said Joe, as they walked out to the street, "how did you come out with Paul Pennell?"

"It looks," said Kathleen, smiling, "as though I might have my big chance at last."

"Meaning he's promised you a part?"

Kathleen laid her hand on Joe's arm. "Maybe we're both booked to become famous, Joe," she said. "You as a playwright, and me as an actress."

"Maybe," said Joe. "And who knows but that some day you'll be playing roles in plays of mine."

At The Theater

When Joe and Kathleen arrived at Ye Old Barn Drama House that evening, it was difficult to find a parking place. Evidently the theater in the barn was going to do a good business.

"It looks," said Joe, "as though all of Linville County had decided to see a show tonight."

"Yes," said Kathleen. "Only a lot of people are from the different summer resorts. Look at the auto licenses: New York, Maryland, Pennsylvania. I guess it's because of the play they're using this week—one that was a hit on Broadway a year or so ago."

"I remember," said Joe. "A sort of farce-comedy. 'Let's Call on Letty.' Ought to get a laugh or two out of it."

"Fred says Ruby's really good in the role of Letty," said Kathleen. "Daisy plays a sort of minor role—but its just the sort I'd like to play."

"You mean you prefer a minor role?"

"Of course not. I mean the role's that of a younger sister who's always trying to fix things up, and getting people involved."

Joe took Kathleen's arm to help her up the narrow steps. They found their seats in the front row, and sat down. Kathleen examined her program, but Joe looked about the reconstructed barn.

"Shh!" said Kathleen.

The lights went out. The curtain was going up.

"I hope," said Joe, "I won't have to nap 'em too much."

He settled back in his seat. So did Kathleen. He felt for one of her hands and found it. She did not object. And the play went on.

It was one of those farces that are practically actor-proof. Only the worst sort of an actor or actress could hurt it. And the performers there in Ye Old Barn Drama House weren't the worst. There was a lot of room for improvement—but they managed to keep the comedy going at a good speed.

When the curtain lowered upon the second act, Joe and Kathleen went out into the open—out into what had once been the barnyard—for a smoke.

"Isn't it delightful!" said Kathleen. "I love it!"

"Not bad," said Joe. "Not half bad."

Kathleen frowned. "How sweet of you!" she said. "To be so generous!"

"Well, you agree, don't you?"

"Of course. But you needn't be so condescending."

Ruby Howard stepped out through the stage entrance. She saw them, and waved.

CHAPTER 17

Sentimental Nonsense!

PAUL PENNELL came out. He had removed his mustache, and was smoking a cigaret in a long holder.

"Hello, Kathleen!" he said. "Hello, Joe!"

"Hello!" said Joe. "Do you feel avuncular toward us all?"

"Oh no" said Paul. "I step out of my role entirely when the curtain falls."

"You discard it like an old rag," said Ruby.

"Right!" said Paul. He frowned at Ruby. "But I never wear it like one." He turned to Kathleen. "I hear the plans are all made for the barbecue. I'm as excited about it as a kid. Almost like looking forward to the coming of a circus."

"I hope," said Joe, "there won't be too much clowning."

Ruby laughed. Paul looked annoyed.

A voice called to them from the inside.

"Curtain in three minutes!" it said.

"See you after the show," said Ruby. She hurried off, tossing aside her cigaret.

"Stick around," Paul said to Kathleen. "Maybe we can manage cold drinks. You know we're running a refreshment stand in connection with the theater." He laughed a bit too gaily. "May help keep us out of the red."

"They look pretty awful in stage makeup, don't they?" said Joe. "I mean—anywhere out on the stage."

"Oh, I don't know," said Kathleen. "They sort of fascinate me."

"They would," said Joe. "Come on, let's climb back into the hayloft."

"I wish," said Kathleen, "that you'd forget it was a barn for at least five minutes."

"All right, honey, I will," said Joe, "for exactly five minutes."

Once more they climbed the narrow steps to the balcony which had once been a place wherein hay was stored. Once more they sat down. And once more Joe felt for and found Kathleen's hand.

But this time she jerked it away.

After the Show

When the final curtain fell upon the play, the audience seemed to be in no hurry to leave. A number of people went over to the refreshment stand about which Paul had told Kathleen and Joe. Several members of the theatrical company were working there. Daisy Doran was one of them. She had not appeared in the last act, and now, wearing slacks and a shirt, she was behind an improvised counter, selling soft drinks. The juvenile was with her.

Joe saw them and smiled, noting how the girls were all patronizing the juvenile's end of the counter, while the men clustered around Daisy.

"Let's get a drink," Joe said to Kathleen. "I'm thirsty."

"Thanks," said Kathleen.

She and Joe went over and joined the crowd. There was laughter, gay chatter, and now and then a snatch of song. One man had poured whisky into his lemonade, and was feeling extraordinarily good-humored. The girl with him was trying very hard to make him quiet down.

"Hello, Daisy!" said Joe.

"Oh, hello, Joe, honey!" said Daisy. "I thought I saw you in the audience tonight."

"You bet I was there," said Joe. "Have to write my review."

"Goodness, and I was simply awful! I really should have had the lead, only I wasn't mature enough."

"You weren't so awful," said Joe—and caught himself.

"Faint praise is worse than none at all" said Daisy sadly. "I suppose I'll have to take what you say about me, and like it. But just wait until I play that little Southern gal in the Civil war play we're going to try out!"

"Okay, I'll wait," said Joe. He paid for the drinks, and took them over to where Kathleen was waiting. "It seems," he said, "that little Daisy Doran is going to play a Southern gal."

"No!" said Kathleen, shocked. "With that New Jersey voice of hers!"

"Let's sit down over by that big tree," Joe suggested. "Remember the linked hearts carved upon it?"

"I do," said Kathleen. Sentimental nonsense, and cruelty to trees!"

The tree was quite a distance from the barn, and the people circulating about it. And as Joe sat down, he thought how incongruous it was to see all those brightly-dressed people moving around a building which had, in the past, been wrapped in darkness at such a late hour.

"What's the matter, can't you talk?" Kathleen asked, presently.

"Sure I can talk," said Joe. "I was just thinking about how things had changed."

"What things?"

"This scene, for one...."

"I like it this way."

"I don't. I much prefer the cows and the chickens."

"That's probably because you're a rustic at heart."

"And that's a mighty nice thing to be," said Joe. He saw a feminine figure detach itself from a group and move toward them. "Here comes Ruby. Shall we ask her to join us?"

Exchange Of Girls

"By all means," said Kathleen. "Suppose you talk shop to her, while I go talk to Paul."

"Shop?"

"Of course. What else?"

"Love, perhaps—sentiment—all that sort of thing."

"Paul doesn't interest me that way."

"Meaning he hasn't yet made love to you—kissed you — or tried to?"

"That's exactly what I mean," said Kathleen. "He doesn't appeal to me sentimentally."

"Oh, well, you may change. Even if you don't, one has to make sacrifices for one's art."

"I wish," said Kathleen, "that you'd kept on being silent."

"Hey wait a minute!" Joe called, as she started off. "What did you do with that bottle?"

"It's there by the tree," Kathleen answered.

"Okay," said Joe. "I made a deposit on it."

"Well, of all things!" said Kathleen. "Worrying about a silly little deposit of a few pennies."

"My darling," said Joe, "pennies count nowadays."

He watched Kathleen go on her way, shaking his head there in the shadow of the big old tree. Such a sweet little thing to look at, and such an exasperating little thing to listen to. Then he put the ideas of Kathleen from his mind, and arose to greet Ruby.

"You were swell," he said, and meant it. "You got right under the skin of Letty, and made her live."

"Thank you Joe," said Ruby. She sat down beside him. "You sound as though you really mean what you say."

"I do" said Joe. "I hope if I ever get a play produced, the actress will make my heroine live as you made Letty live. I liked you a lot, Ruby—really I did."

"Joe you're sweet." Ruby leaned back against the trunk of the tree. "And this is a heavenly spot. I'm falling in love with it."

"The barn, you mean?" asked Joe.

"Yes. And the country all around it."

From where I sit . . .

by Joe Marsh

WHEN you consider the new products we've seen developed in our time . . . you'd think that just about everything worth while in the world was invented in the last few years.

It's kind of refreshing, for a change, to find out that some pleasant things in our modern life date way back to ancient days.

For instance — I read the other day about a piece of pottery some scientists dug up in Mesopotamia. On the pottery was a picture of two brewery workers making beer.

That picture was 6,000 years old!

You know, that's something to think about. Beer...6,000 years ago! I wonder if it tasted anything like the good lager beer I have sent up to the house every now and then.

Somewhere else, I read that beer came over on the Mayflower — in fact, if I remember right, a shortage of beer was one of the reasons why the Pilgrims landed on Plymouth Rock instead of some other place.

Interesting, isn't it, how a simple, everyday beverage like beer can get tangled up with history!

Maybe it's because there's something fundamental and friendly about beer. It's the beverage of moderate, sensible, well-adjusted people in every part of the world, and always has been.

Personally, I like it because it tastes so good and is so refreshing . . . and I know I can trust it. I get a thrill out of thinking that maybe some writer fellow in ancient Egypt or ancient Mesopotamia, thousands of years ago, felt the same way about beer.

It's a small world, after all.

Closely parallel to that movement ran the movement for the ...propagation of the Gospel ...here again, Englishmen were early ...on the march. Here especially was a ...calling in which the followers of ...Wesley were preeminent, and in ...the missionary field the name of ...Methodist and long stood high in ...power.

Wesley died, as he had been born, a member of the Church of England—elder a member on whom the spirit of church discipline sat early. His preaching had aroused a new enthusiasm for which the church still largely under the enervating influence of the 18th century, could not easily find place. And so gradually his followers found no room within the old boundaries of the mother church. But if the Church could not approve everything he did neither could she remain unaffected by the spirit that he had evoked. Besides the missionary impulse of which I have spoken that spirit led many to feel the obligation arising from the existence of toiling masses in the new industrial towns. Wesley persuaded the humblest factory worker that in God's eyes his soul was of inestimable value. That feeling of the ultimate worth of the individual profoundly influenced the economic and political struggle of the 19th century. To that was due much of the moral fervor of the social reform and trade union movement of those early days. The same belief gave a religious background to English radicalism that sets it apart from the socialist movements in all other European countries and is matched only in the United States.

WESLEY'S WORK DEEPLY ROOTED IN U. S.

Possibly, too, it has been that which has saved us from revolutionary violence on the rare occasions when even the English genius for compromise seemed liable to fail. It is certainly not untrue to say that Wesley did much to inspire that which Vice President Wallace the other day finely called "the march of the common people."

In America his work is no less deeply rooted. Wesley's own two-year sojourn in Savannah may have come to little, but young and ardent missionaries afterward wrought mightily in his name. When Francis Asbury landed in 1771 the Wesleyans numbered no more than 316. When he died in 1816, the Methodist church could count over 214,000 members. Today that figure, I believe, stands at more than eight millions, who comprise the largest Protestant church in the United States. To the vigor, the devotion and the Christian spirit of American Methodism I gladly pay tribute today. As British ambassador, moreover, I could express the gratitude which I know the Methodists of England feel for the generous help they are receiving from their American brethren, as they labor to maintain the work of their Church through the trials of bombs and total war.

It is a commonplace that this war is essentially different from any that has preceded it. Yet that needs constant emphasis lest our will to win suffer by any failure to realize the full extent of what we stand to lose. To realize what that is, we must first turn the light of history upon ourselves.

From the dawn of human history, man has been aware, however dimly, of some personal Power outside, and greater than, himself, with which in some mysterious fashion he was in relation. This Power he conceived capable of being offended or propitiated and from this elemental conception there gradually grew in man a sense of right and wrong, based on the moral attributes of this unknown Being, which he came to call God.

From this sense of right and wrong flows the perpetual responsibility of choice, which each one of us knows through conscience. By the right exercise of that choice, we keep or lose our self respect. Moreover this responsibility of choice reposes on the basis of Free Will, which gives to our choice its quality, good or bad, by making it spontaneous and not mechanical. And this is one of the vital respects in which human beings differ from animals. For the animal's sense of right and wrong does not rest on any scheme of moral values, but is purely experimental, based upon the simple recollection of what does in fact bring punishment, and what, reward.

The judgments on which man has made his choice have naturally reflected differences of time and of human nature. What has seemed wrong to one generation has been approved by another; what one man has thought right, his neighbor has condemned. The tests and standards that mankind applies are still undergoing revision, and will doubtless continue to do so till the end of time. But this is only the natural outcome of man's effort, however feeble and spasmodic, to adjust his own standards to those of the ultimate Power, which he has always felt to be a force for good and with which he has felt his own life to be so mysteriously linked.

But to state this general propo... ...sition and to assert that it is received ... by the human race ... it is not to deny that ... many attempts have been made by ... and resolute men to make ... their choice between good and ... evil by standards of their own ... devising. But, even here, what is striking is not the temerity of the ... attempts, but the hypocrisy of ... those who make them. It is the ... tribute, as La Rochefoucauld said, ... that vice pays to virtue, for every ... time that the attempt is made, ... its authors by one means or another seek to clothe their undertaking with some semblance of ... divine authority.

SAME THING TAKES PLACE IN GERMANY

This ... exactly what is taking ... place in Nazi Germany today. ... There we see the latest and ... greatest attempt in history to live ... without reference to God. Where ... others have failed, Hitler believes ... he can be successful. The ... machinery that he would employ ... to achieve his end is carefully ... contrived and brutally efficient. ... Nothing is left undone to inculcate the idea of the State as the ... Supreme Good, with the Fuehrer, ... as its all-powerful representative. ... The State, in the person of Hitler, is the sole and final judge ... of right and wrong. Religion may ... only be tolerated if it consents to ... be the servant of the state, and ... for Dr. Niemoller, or for any one ... else, Bishop Berggrav in Norway, who dares to assert the supremacy of the individual conscience, and of some law higher than that of the State, there is the Gestapo and its concentration camp.

To the worship of this new God Hitler by appeal to many of its highest qualities, has perverted the young mind of Germany, and of all his crimes this always seems to me the greatest. Just as Napoleon harnessed to his own ambition the noblest instincts of the French Revolution, so Hitler, with greater means and greater lack of scruple, has seduced the German youth, and in so doing created what will surely be the greatest of our post-war problems.

We of the United Nations entered this war with the handicap of meager material equipment. That deficiency has cost us dear, but is rapidly being overtaken. For while I speak we are steadily beating the Axis Powers in the battle of production as they will soon learn if they don't already know it.

Not on the spiritual side had we as yet called to our aid the invisible and invincible strength that was to hand. We had come to take the things that we call our way of life so much for granted, that they had lost for us some of their ancient value. So sure were we of freedom, that we were not sufficiently afraid of slavery. So firm seemed the traditional foundations of Christianity, that we felt no direct personal obligation to be their champion.

Now all that is changed, and suddenly we see that things which have come down to us with the accumulated strength of centuries are in mortal peril. We see another thing too, that if we are to break this evil madness now loose in Nazi Germany, the conviction with which we defend our faith must be as deep and as passionate as that with which our enemies would destroy it. And this means that we must re-establish the standards set for us by the Founder of our religion, wherever as Nations we have allowed them to be overgrown.

If I mistake not, We are becoming more and more alive to this necessity every day. In this very place, a few months ago, was held a National Study Conference of Church leaders. They adopted a "Statement of Guiding Principles" which makes a constructive and honest approach to the complex problems of the war and of the peace. I was encouraged to read the approval that was there given to the principals which my government and yours laid down in their agreement of last February 28th, dealing with the obligations arising from the operation of the Lend-Lease Act. The seventh article of that Agreement prescribes a set of definite obectives to be pursued by our two governments, and by any other governments that may be like-minded. The purpose is clearly stated to be "the expansion . . . of production, employment, and the exchange and consumption of goods, which are the material foundations of the liberty and welfare of all peoples."

Those are words of high significance, for if you hold, as I do, that the proper business of the state is to do everything in its power to secure the material conditions necessary for its citizens to lead the good life, you will believe with me that by this agreement our two governments have laid a foundation-stone on which a new and juster order can be built.

Always behind any action that may be taken by Governments must be the spiritual conviction of the great body of their citizens. And that is why importance attaches to this Conference held here, to which I have referred; to the strong Roman Catholic movement, for example, in my own country, fitly called "The Sword of the Spirit"; and to the Conference of Church of England clergy and laymen held recently at Malvern. It is certain that man needs bread to live, and there, Governments have great responsibilities. But it is also most certain that man does not live by bread alone, and it is the constant duty of Christian citizens to remind their representatives in Government of the respect to which Christian principels are entitled.

Thousands Honor War Dead

Crowds View Parade and Attend Exercises in Marion on Memorial Day.

An estimated 750 to 1,000 persons took part in Marion's Memorial day parade Saturday. Later, the Memorial address at the cemetery, delivered by Russell M Wilhelm, assistant city solicitor, was heard by some 1,500 persons.

Thousands lined the streets to view the parade, the first in the history of Marion county in which no Civil war veterans participated. The last veteran of that war from this county died in December, 1941.

Two New Groups

In the parade two new marching groups made their first appearance, the uniformed Marion Rifles and the Women's Ambulance Corps.

The Harding High school and Eagles bands played in the parade, which formed on West Center street between Oak and Prospect streets, moved east on Center, south on Main street to the cemetery, where graves were decorated with flowers.

Rev. D N Kelly of Wesley Methodist church gave opening and closing prayers at the cemetery. Norval Foreman, commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, read Gen. Logan's order creating Memorial day, Decoration of the graves was in charge of D J. McDonald. E. M. Breitnaupt read Lincoln's Gettysburg address.

Following ceremonies at the cemetery, the parade reformed and marched into the downtown area where it was reviewed at the courthouse.

War of Survival

Mr. Wilhelm, in his address said, "Today we are a nation at war, not, if you please, fighting for any personal glorification, nor for any other nation but fighting to survive, to keep America a nation still free for its peoples.

"This year," he added, "our observance takes on a new significance. It is time for a solemn reflection.

"New potential heroes are all about us. Some of their names are already written in flaming letters—the Colin Kellys and their kind have paid the supreme sacrifice. Taps have sounded, they have made their final report to their Supreme Commander, their God and our God.

"These veterans here know that war itself is not beautiful—it is not glorious—it is a horrible, bloody, stinking, vermin-infested business. The sacrifices made by our heroes are glorious, their devotion to their cause beautiful. Today we decorate their graves and revere their memory."

He concluded, "As we leave here, let use reconsecrate and rededicate our efforts toward a united and forward people, so that our flag may continue to fly over a God-fearing and freedom-loving America."

Defense Bonds Go To Golfers in Tourney Events

A three-way tie for first place in the blind bogey golf tournament over the week-end at the Marion Country Club was won on a draw by Millard Hunt. He and T. W. Jenkins and H T. Lewis tied with 93. Mr. Hunt won a $25 defense bond.

Merchandise awards in the contest went to W. L. Young, Carl Danner, H J. Grigsby, F. W. Bacon and W. J. Rowley, all with a score of 97; Jim Mayden, Carl LaMarche and George DeWolfe with 99; Judge Hector Young, J. E. Slanser, Cliff Rowley, John Peacock and J. T. Lynch with 02. J. T. Whiting, C. O. Brown, Dan LaMarche, R. M. Cheney, Paul Hunt, Charles Kersey and Jack Sharkey with 96.

Despite the handicap of occasional rain a large number of public links golfers tried their hand on the Mar-O-Del course Memorial day. An even larger group toured the 37 par layout Sunday due to the excellent weather. Comedalist for the week-end were John Rife county, county champ, and Bob Graham with 76's. Other low cards were turned in by the following golfers: Dick Owens with 82, Rees Fogle and Don Pfleninger with 83's, Bill Ulmer with 85 and Chuck Elliott, who had an 86.

Bob Graham had low net for the Memorial day flag tournament. Placing first in that event, which was played on a handicap basis, was Leo Oberlander. Second was R Chlvington, third E. Williamson and fourth Betty Rife. Winners received prizes in defense savings stamps.

SCHOOL PENMANSHIP SAMPLES EXHIBITED

Excellence Shown in Work of Marion Pupils.

An exhibit of penmanship prepared by grades of the elementary schools of the city which has been on display in a window of a vacant room at 128 South Main street, was removed today. The display, the first of its kind, was made at the request of Miss Geneva Speese, penmanship supervisor in the city schools. Only a part of the work done by the pupils was on display.

Each figure in the penmanship parade poster made by pupils of Miss Gladys Edelman of Greenwood street school represents a child enrolled. A yellow balloon was awarded for good position while writing, a blue one for free arm movement, an orange one for good form in all writing and a green one for habit maintained in all writing.

On the Good Writer Knights at Forest Lawn school pupils' names were placed by their teacher, Miss Marie Johnson, when all phases of good writing was observed. Daily work being well done at Silver Street under the direction of Miss Esther Werrlake resulted in the children having their names placed on a poster captioned "We Are Proud of Our Penmanship." First grade pupils showed their ability to associate animal stories, writing and expression with animal pictures and the display included the work of Miss Maryalice Virtue's pupils at North Main street.

The poster, "I'm Back in the Saddle Again," was used by pupils in H. C Burrell's room at Mark street school. For good position the pupil received a horse; for good movement, a harness, blanket and saddle; good form, a rider with the pupil's name upon it and for good writing all day long, a pennant.

Of particular artistic note was the sixth grade display at Mark Street where writing was supervised by Miss Louretta Gilmore. The school's exhibit was a "Ship of Penmanship" designed and constructed by Mr. Burrell.

Before the display was placed down town it was at the administration building for teacher observation.

beyond the absolute minimum required for tactical training.

British air experts said that with American help the operating force of 1,000 bombers might on occasion be tripled, with each of the 3,000 planes a four-engined monster capable of bearing a tremendous bomb load.

41 Planes Lost

The British lost 41 planes Saturday night, about a four per cent ratio as against the 10 per cent figured as the limit under which such an operation can be counted as a success.

The RAF was active again Sunday night over Hitler's domain. The action was largely reconnaissance but the air ministry said also that Hurricanes and Boston (Douglas) bombers attacked 11 goods trains and blasted airdrome runways in the Netherlands and France.

Only bad weather, informed London sources said, prevented continued assaults.

The Germans said single British planes carried out "nuisance" raids on western Germany last night and admitted "great damage" from the Saturday night attack but insisted that only "about 70" planes took part.

German planes struck back Sunday night—weakly by comparison. They attacked the cathedral city of Canterbury, southeast England, with about 25 planes. Another two dozen craft were active against other British targets. Canterbury's historic buildings, business areas and homes all suffered from the German bombardment.

By daylight, the RAF took up the gauntlet again but there was nothing to indicate that the new fighter-bomber sweep over northern France was more than the customary daylight operation. The day shift seemed to be concentrating on the Calais area.

Arnold Wants U. S. Planes in Action

By The Associated Press

LONDON, June 1 — The approaching day when United States and British air forces will fly wing to wing in pulverizing smashes against Germany was foreseen in an exchange of messages today between Lieut.-Gen. Henry H. Arnold, United States air force chief, and Air Marshal A. T. Harris, chief of the RAF bomber command.

Arnold, who has been conferring on joint operations here, wrote to Harris yesterday:

"As commanding general of the United States army air force I desire to extend my congratulations to you, your staff and combat crews for the great raid last (Saturday) night on Cologne.

"It was bold in conception and superlative in execution. Please convey to your officers and men my admiration for their courage and skill and say that our air forces hope very soon to fly and fight beside them in these decisive blows against our common enemy."

Harris replied:

"All ranks of the bomber command are highly appreciative of your message. We, too, look forward to the time now so near when the United States army air force, which already so gallantly and effectively share their burden in the far east and elsewhere, commence operation at our side in this theater of war."

R. E. PARISH GETS PILOT'S LICENSE

First To Get Wings Under Civil Air Patrol Plan.

Richard E. Parish, 33, of 366 North Prospect street, part owner of the Parish Dairy Co., is the first Marion member of the Civil Air Patrol to be awarded a private pilot's license since the local unit was set up in February.

He received his license after being tested by James W. Harrington, CAA flight examiner and commander of Wing 5 of the Civil Air Patrol. Mr. Parish received his instruction from Alvin A. "Doc" Freeman, manager of the Marion port and operator of the Freeman Flying Service. He has had nearly 50 hours of solo flying.

When the local CAP unit was formed, Mr Parish was made executive officer. In that position he has conducted classes in meterology and navigation twice a week at Harding High school.

Other CAP members who have already passed their initial solo flight test are William R. Reichenstein of 604 King avenue, Jack Barnhart of 240 Clover avenue, Edward Hudde of 868 Sheridan road and Warren King of Altoona, Pa., an instrument man at the Scioto Ordnance Plant.

Flight areas are being rearranged, Mr. Freeman said, because of the Scioto Ordnance Plant. In the near future government regulations will forbid flying over the plant reservation.

On "Missing" List Issued by U. S. Navy

Seaman Harold Thomas, son of Mrs. Viola Lingo of 317 South Vine street, is one of five youths from the Marion area reported as missing in action in the navy's casualty list No 4, made public today. The new list, covering the period April 16 to May 10, inclusive, added the names of 64 dead, 54 wounded and 2,193 missing. The latest accounting included the names of some missing or dead who previously had been reported wounded.

AUTO OWNER FINED

Clyde Ashworth, 53, of 753 North State street pleaded guilty before Municipal Judge Hazen Friday to a charge of permitting an unlicensed driver to operate his car. He was fined $10 and costs. He was arrested Thursday night on route 4, north of town, by state highway patrolmen.

John Geyer, Known to Marion Players, Stricken.

Twenty-three year old John Geyer, left fielder for the Fostoria Red Flares of the Ohio State semi-pro league was stricken with a heart attack during the Fostoria-Fremont game Sunday at Fremont and died enroute to Memorial hospital in Fremont.

He suffered the attack while running to second base. Fostoria forfeited the game in the third inning when it was learned that young Geyer had passed away. Officials of the league said the game probably would be played as part of a double-header later. Geyer had come in late in the game to make up a relief role victory over Fremont. Yes, neighbor, you . . .

. . . quiet, self-effacing you are a living part and parcel of the biggest, toughest, bloodiest war in all the hard pages of history.

You can't escape it. You can't hide out on the moon!

For here is a war EVERYBODY is in. The man behind the plow. The kid in knee pants. The oldster with the cane. The housewife with the market basket. The white collar worker. The blue collar worker. The girl in the schoolroom.

We're ALL in it—lock, stock, body, and soul.

If America loses, you lose. If America goes down (and it can), you go down, too. And every decent thing goes down with you . . . that home, that hearth, that patch of ground, that blessed freedom.

The only way to save these things is to win the war!

And the only way to win is to outbuild, outgun, outplane, and outfight the enemy—to make him sick at the sound of a propeller, the sight of a tank, the roar of a bomb

That's where you come in.

For, brother and sister, building these things takes money. Lots of it! And your Government needs that money right now! Not for keeps. They don't want you to give it away. They just want you to lend it to them.

Invest every dime, quarter, half-dollar, and dollar you can lay your hands on in U. S. Stamps and Bonds. Not just spare money but money you can't spare. Dig deep. Deny yourself. This is war!

Make every pay day Bond day. Make every day Stamp day. Start doing it this very day!

Prepared But Not Resolved

THE good event plainly do not want to fiddle with manpower freezing unless everything else fails. Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the war manpower commission, has the thankless job of trying to stabilize the labor market by threatening to put it under government control for war jobs but never actually cracking down. He will be prepared—but not resolved—to do more if Germany has done to mobilize labor.

It is a terrible question, as to which best sense thing Mr. McNutt has been permitted to say is in the expectancy that others will handle him. Labor is engaged in a game of musical chairs. Jobs are hunting men. ... in a decade, the ... ing power to get an ... thinks he is worth.

This is causing too many ... to another. Labor is hunting for ... to improve itself; frequently this is done at the expense of war production. The government would like to have it stopped. The government hopes for the best. But it hopes to get by without getting tough. The government probably is hoping for more than it will get.

Even former President Hoover, who can't be accused of favoring undue centralization of authority, has asserted publicly that the United States can't expect to beat totalitarianism without adapting some of the means of beating it at its own game. In the long run, stabilization of the labor market will have to be given serious consideration.

Sitting Birds

UNEASINESS about the popularity of congress-baiting is well founded. There needs to be straight thinking about congressional welfare in wartime.

Executive authority necessarily is supreme and dominant in wartime. Congressmen, aware of this, voluntarily suspend many of their cherished prerogatives. They become members of a ratifying body, rather than members of a deliberative body. Presumably, war tests the wisdom of all the deliberate decisions they have made for years past; the time for building carefully is over, and the time for putting into effect is at hand.

Under dictatorship, which is the type of government most easily adapted to wartime, there is never any deliberation. Executive authority is supreme. Representatives of the people are suffered in positions of nominal importance in the government solely to appease the people. It is always wartime. Executive authority always is supreme. The legislator is unknown. His place is occupied by the rubber—the rubber stamp.

It is claimed that sniping at congressmen at a time like this is not only shortsighted but bad sportsmanship—like shooting a sitting bird. That is true. Congressmen are the victim of circumstances. While they ponder the outcome of the momentous events whizzing past them they might give a little special thought to two elements in their distasteful situation. First, their prestige as legislators had been injured extensively by rubber stamp behavior before war started. Second, their prestige as legislators can be improved by refusal to make the same mistake when the war is over.

War Without Information

FIGHTING between the Russian and German armies seems to be approaching the same level of confusion it occupied during the first two phases of the Soviet-Nazi war. When the Germans were advancing and the Russians later were driving them back, only the largest and most important developments were publicized. The same thing may be expected to happen again. It may be weeks, perhaps months, before a clear pattern will emerge from the welter of conflicting communiques.

With the exception of a few correspondents who were allowed to tag along with the Russian armies last winter on their counter-attacks, objective reporters have not been permitted to get close to the Russo-German front. All news of actual fighting has been filtered through bureaus of information or filched from newspapers. The task of keeping track of the war has been for the most part one of piecing together scraps of information gleaned from reports compiled by propagandists.

All the stories of actual fighting conditions remain to be written when the war is over and the usual bumper crop of post-war journalists springs up. Totalitarian Germany and Russia, having decided to get along without objectivity, simply have dispensed with war correspondents as such. News about Russia's fighting, such as it is, is collected by Red Star, the army newspaper, and the party press. German news comes from the high command, meaning Hitler's headquarters. It's all part of the technique of total war.

Last refuge of objective reporting in the world today is the United Nations, which dare to admit to their people that they sometimes sustain losses equal to or greater than those of the enemy. When a German general or a Japanese general says, as U. S. Gen. Stilwell said about Burma, "I claim we got (censored) beaten out of us," the war will be over—in more ways than one.

41 Graduated at St. Mary in Sunday Commencement

Rev. Father Robert Von Kaenel Gives Graduation Sermon; Scholarship Awards Given.

Forty-one St. Mary Parochial High school seniors, including a girl whose mother had died only 16 hours previously, received their diplomas from their pastor, Rev. Father William J. Spickerman, yesterday afternoon at St. Mary Catholic church in impressive ceremonies climaxed by solemn benediction. Some 700 parents, relatives and friends, including many non-Catholic friends, attended the sixty-second graduation service.

The bereaved girl, Helen Lawler, whose mother, Mrs. Frank Lawler of 280 Lafayette street died suddenly about midnight Saturday at City hospital where she appeared to be recovering quite satisfactorily following an operation, was one of two students who received gold medals for general excellence. The other medal was awarded to James Schuler. The medals were awarded for straight A grades for four years of high school.

Comforted by the words of her pastor, the young girl donned her white gown and mortar board and took part in the graduation services.

The graduation sermon by Rev. Father Robert Von Kaenel of Dayton, a graduate of St. Mary school 23 years ago, stressed the Catholic program of education and the contributions of Catholics to the United States from the time of Christopher Columbus to present active service in World War II.

Gold Medals Given

Gold medals for distinction in scholarship were awarded to Robert McGinnis, Robert Luke, Donald Coffey, Joan Schelb, Ruth Jayne Hut and Mary Jane Williams, and a medal for perfect attendance throughout the high school course was presented to Edward McKinney. The Robert A. Kelly medal for athletics was presented to McGinnis in basketball and Schuler in football.

Father Von Kaenel in his opening statements said that the first Catholic school was established more than 1,900 years ago in Palestine by Jesus when He taught His first graduates, the Twelve Apostles, and sent them forth to spread the gospel.

"Religion is the heart and soul of all education," he said. "A person separate them and you have only a dead body from the soul."

He said the Catholic program of education takes into consideration not only body but soul and prepares its followers for life hereafter, hence will be efficient in this world and for the next.

In Europe he said the dominated countries do not permit people the right of educating their children as they wish. He spoke of the Catholic press as one of the arts and sciences of the Old World, of the Catholic observation of education.

Church and Education

"The church, he declared, is the mother of education. He told of outstanding Catholic scientists and patriots who have been Catholics and spoke of men of the faith who have been heroes in every war from the Revolution to the present conflict. The first school in America, he reminded his listeners, was a Catholic school established in 1606 in St. Augustine, Fla.

Today Father Von Kaenel said there are 8,000 parochial schools in this country, two million Catholic students, 75 colleges for men, 227 for women, 22 universities and 175 seminaries.

This land of the free, he said, is a beacon light to Catholic education and the record of the patriotic contribution of Catholic schools in the United States.

"Catholics, by building and maintaining their own schools, have relieved American taxpayers of an enormous burden," the speaker pointed out, saying that according to the United States office of education it costs $100 to have each school child and that if the Catholic institutions closed it would cost the government three-quarters of a billion dollars a year for maintenance alone.

Speaking of the Catholic training of loyal citizens, he said: "A faithful Catholic must be a faithful citizen. A Catholic is bound to pay to the Lord which gives him civil liberties his service and patriotism." Quoting fig-

...ement Speaker Tells Graduates To Be Guarded by ...gence, Faith in Democracy and Christian Belief.

Pech... ...f the college of edu... ...e University of Cin... ...the 299 members of ...e High school class ...an estimated 2,000 ...atives and friends at ...n annual commence... ...es Friday night at ...oqua pavilion.

...Marion's first war-time ...ment in 24 years.

...hstein did not paint ...ture for today's young ...he told them that if ...it guarded by intelli-gence, by a belief that democracy is a right they are willing not so much to die for as to live for, and a strong Christian belief, they are better prepared than young people of any other generation.

The 12 years they have been in school have included the years when the country has gone to the lowest depths of unhappiness, but today the United States has passed the "too many men and not enough jobs" era and is in the midst of a tremendous reversal, he said.

Dr. Pechstein spoke strongly against the "authoritative governments" of Germany and Italy, but he said they were possible only because of the youth trained and imbued with the ideology of the leading forces.

Compliments Class

He paid high tribute to the class in his talk on "Youth Looks to the Future" and that in proportion to the size of the community, Marion had more graduates than any other community he knows of.

He said he liked to speak to such a group because they were youthful and because he could speak to them as trained, intelligent people, of the trials and struggles ahead.

Referring to the change from too many men for too few jobs, he said it was "remarkable and in some ways tragic" that such powers as Germany and Italy have become great because they have called and prepared the youth of the nations not only to serve but to give their lives for a cause that does not countenance democracy and Christianity."

"We have no idea of what tomorrow will be," he said, "but it will be an era of tremendous efficiency and power," mentioning the strides of science and industry.

Unused Power

"Children of the power generation have scarcely begun to use this power," Dean Pechstein said. "We became great and lost sight of the still greater need for another power — which we must label Christianity."

Led by the graduates, a pavilion-wide ovation was given Paul Weiler, sixth ranking student in Ohio and valedictorian of his class when he was presented his diploma.

Presentation of diplomas climaxed a program of music and the talk by Dean Pechstein. Prinicipal O. H. P. Snyder read the names of the candidates for graduation and Supt E. E. Holt gave the diplomas to Frank C. Robinson, member of the board of education, who made the presentation to the seniors. Mr. Robinson's son, Glenn, was a member of the class.

The Harding orchestra, directed by Homer E. Huffman, instrumental music supervisor, played the processional and recessional marches and three program selections. The a cappella choir, directed by L. G. Jones, public school music supervisor, sang three selections.

Greetings To Class

Mr. Robinson, instead of greeting each graduate individually, extended the congratulations of the school board, saying, "We commend you on the splendid record you have made in all fields of activity of your school work. By graduating you have brought honor not only to us but to your homes, school and community. As we possess knowledge and health we are truly rich. Our wish is that your future be crowned with success and that every success be crowned with happiness."

Supt E. E. Holt in introducing Dr. Pechstein reversed the usual order and presented the speaker to the class, which he termed "the finest class anyone could hope to have."

The program, which was broadcast over Station WMRN, included singing of the national anthem by the student body and audience, invocation by Rev. S. S. Hardy of St. Paul's Episcopal church, father of Mary Grace Hardy, a graduate, a bassoon selection by Frances Hedge, a senior, singing of the class song led by Mary Queen, the composer, and the recessional march played by the orchestra."

Rev. M. E. Hollensen of Emanuel Lutheran church gave the benediction.

With their diplomas each graduate received a white carnation, the class flower, from one of the class officers, headed by Day Hurst as president.

The stage decoration of flowers and the American and school flags, were in charge of the Harding Chapter of the National Honor society.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Aside from the sixty-mile an hour Mosquito Torpedo Boats, the Sub Chasers are the speedsters of our Navy. Light and fast, they are the eyes of the Fleet on the water. They displace approximately 1,500 tons and cost about $1,400,000 each.

We need many of these powerful, fast little boats to cope with the treacherous submarine type of naval warfare fostered by our enemies. Everybody can help pay for more Sub Chasers by putting at least ten percent of his income into War Bonds. Buy Bonds or Stamps every pay day. Buy them from your bank, your post office, or from your office or factory through the Payroll Savings Plan.

WPB AIMS AT BETTER DISTRIBUTION OF STEEL

Inventory Control Improved for That Purpose.

CLEVELAND, June 1—The war production board has improved its inventory control to bring about a better distribution of steel for essential purposes, the magazine Steel says today in its weekly review of the industry. The improvement is reflected by a closer balance between the requests for steel plates and th allocation of tonnages.

"June allocations show the best relationship yet attained and it is believed that by mid-autumn plate production will meet all rated requirements, although not much capacity expansion is expected by that time," the review adds. "Allocations and directives are assuming a leading position in controlling delivery of steel, congestion in A-1-A priority being such that this rating has lost much of its meaning and value.

"Mills which have been accepting nothing below top rating now in some cases have so much tonnage on directives that they are unable to promise delivery on any rating."

Distribution of Grade Cards Is Arranged

Public school pupils who will be unable to get their grade cards Tuesday at their school may get them after Tuesday at the administration building on South Prospect street. The arrangement was made for the convenience of those families who will not have returned from the holiday vacation.

Time of grade card distribution at the various buildings follows: All elementary schools, Harding High school and Thomas A. Edison Junior High school, 1:30 p. m.; Central Junior High school, 1 p. m.; Vernon Heights Junior High school, 10 a. m.

Errors [illegible] the Marion Hawks their fourth defeat in six starts of the Ohio State Semi-Pro league season [illegible] Marion Memorial field [illegible] Findlay Memorial Day game between the two teams at Gaston was marred by the death of Victor Woodworth, 26-year-old Fostoria baseball player.

Woodworth died [illegible] after being struck on the head by a pitched ball [illegible] Saturday's game. [illegible] Findlay 9-1.

After the [illegible] opening of yesterday's game Marion [illegible] was virtually a one man team. The Green Sox plated five runs in the fourth inning after trailing 2-0 through the first three innings. King Bacon pitched superb ball in relieving the first nine batsmen.

In the fourth, Reese led off with a single to short right field. Russell doubled, scoring Reese. Hale filed to Hodge in deep center field. Simon was safe at second on Darrell Roseberry's two-base error, Russell scoring. Schlosser, McDonald and Bayliss were safe on first on three fielders' choices. Savico singled sharply to left field to score Schlosser and Bayliss. Hazelton singled to center field to score McDonald.

Four straight singles in the sixth inning netted the eventual winners three runs. Three more crossed in the eighth on Manager Hale's mighty circuit clout over the left field wall. Hale at one time played in the Class C Mid-Atlantic league.

The Hawks scored once in the first and second, twice in the seventh and three times in the ninth. A last-inning rally by Marion was nipped by Findlay Pitcher Savico who fanned Bascos for the second time to end the game.

The Hawks will entertain the league-leading Fremont team Wednesday night at 7 on the Lincoln park diamond in a twilight game. Other games Wednesday are Tiffin at Fostoria and Findlay at Galion.

NEW YORK, June 1—Study in contrasts—or is it? . . . England's wartime sport has become a week-end affair with players and fans engaged in war work through the week. . . . Saturday two cup final soccer games drew 120,000 fans . . . In America baseball is going on a business-as-usual basis and not getting much from week-day customers. . . . Saturday and Sunday major league doubleheaders drew 392,000 . . . Looks as if the athletes might as well save their efforts for occasions when the fans are willing and able to turn out . . . As further proof, five big horse tracks drew 170,000 fans yesterday. . . . When Market Wise won the Suburban at Belmont, it was the first victory for Lou Tufano's stable in 27 races since the Widener at Hialeah.

Wives of Birmingham ball players have volunteered to sell war stamps in the booth at Rickwood Field these nights . . . When Sid Luckman, the Chicago Bears quarterback, gets around to telling Sid Jr about his record, a good many linemen's ears likely will burn. In three seasons, Sid has carried the ball 66 times for a net of minus two yards. . . . Which brings up the idea that maybe the navy air corps is signing up so many football players for other reasons than physical training — any coach will tell you the best way to stop an air attack is by rushing the passer . . . Cleveland and Pittsburgh are holding against each other for a Bob Pastor-Harry Bobo fight this summer. After Larry Atkins offered Bob $25,000 to fight in Cleveland, Art Rooney blew in and boosted the ante to $35,000.

Runner-Up to Craig Wood in 1941 National Open Here Wednesday.

Denny Shute, former professional at the Scioto Country club in Columbus, runner-up for the 1941 National Open golf title and quarter finalist in last year's P. G. A. tournament, will apper here Wednesday afternoon in a match sponsored by the Montgomery Ward Co. for the benefit of the Marion Canteen. The match is to be played over the nine-hole Country club course, located three and a half miles south of Marion on Route 4.

Johnny Rife, brilliant southpaw golfing star who is permanent holder of The Marion Star county championship trophy by virtue of three consecutive triumphs in the annual classic, will team with Shute against Boo Owens and Bill Schimmel.

Denny Shute

Owens finished second to Rife in last year's county meet and is present Country club champion. Year for year he has been one of the leading links performers in Marion.

In Schimmel, Owens has one of the games greatest "form" players. An exceptional, but not spectacular, performer, Schimmel is regarded in professional ranks as one of the best teachers of the game in this area. For many years he has turned down professional tournament engagements to concentrate on development of new stars. In concentrating on golfing instruction, he has developed a great golfing technique. This is his fourth year at the Country club.

The foursome will play a regulation 18 hole match.

W. M. Preston, manager of the Marion Montgomery Ward Co. store, said today that Marion Boy Scouts have been requested to police the Country club grounds during the match. They will keep onlookers off the fairways and greens during the play.

All proceeds from the match will be turned over to the Canteen fund to help defray cost of furnishing troops passing through Marion with candy, fruit, cigarets, magazines, etc.

Shute, twice P. G. A. champion and former British open title-holder, will give a 30-minute driving exhibition slated to start at 4 p. m. before the match.

For three years he was a member of the International Ryder Cup team.

Shute will conduct a brief question-answer discussion following the match. Mr. Preston said:

Mel Ott Shatters Old Mark; Attendance Hits 392,280 in Two Days.

By The Associated Press

Major league baseball enjoyed a rare week-end after the busiest week-end of the season, which produced disaster in double doses to many of the pennant contenders and success in the same quantities to those who could withstand the pressure of four games in two days.

A total of 392,280 fans swarmed to the ball parks, 197,820 of them on Decoration Day and 194,460 of them yesterday. And that doesn't include the hundreds of service men who were admitted free.

Here are some of the most important happenings witnessed:

The New York Yankees stretched their American league lead to eight games.

The Brooklyn Dodgers boosted their lead in the national league to six games.

The Cleveland Indians stacked into fourth place in the American league while the Detroit Tigers took over second and the Boston Red Sox moved up a notch to third.

Cards in Second

The St. Louis Cardinals replaced the Boston Braves in second place in the National.

Mel Ott, playing his 17th year in the majors—all with the Giants—tied Rogers Hornsby's National league record of 1,582 runs batted in.

Two of yesterday's scheduled double-headers were cut in half by the weather but five of the six played resulted in double victories.

The lone exception was at Philadelphia, where the Yankees came from behind with a seven-run sixth inning rally to whip the Athletics, 11-7, then bumped into Luman Harris who checked them on four hits for a 4-2 decision in the afterpiece.

Elden Auker and Johnny Niggeling shared the pitching honors as the St. Louis Browns stopped the Cleveland Indians, 5-4 and 6-3.

The Boston Red Sox crushed Buck Newsom and the Washington Senators, 11-1, in the first game and took the second, 4-3, on pinch-hitter Lou Finney's two-run single.

Aging Ted Lyons pitched and batted the Chicago White Sox to a 9-4 ten-inning triumph over the Detroit Tigers, getting three hits in five appearances and touching off a five-run rally in the tenth. The second game was halted in the third inning.

Curt Davis pitched the Brooklyn Dodgers to a 10-2 triumph over the Braves and Whitlow Wyatt tossed a six-hitter in the nightcap to make it unanimous, 3-1.

Bill Lohrman pitched the Giants to a 3-2 decision over the Phils in the first game, and Bob Carpenter yielded only seven blows in the second game, won by the Giants, 7-1.

The floundering Pittsburgh Pirates were no trouble for the Cincinnati Reds, who won the opening game, 8-2, on the five-hit pitching of Bucky Walters and scored a 3-0 shutout in the nightcap as Ray Starr scattered six safeties.

Lefty Pollet pitched the St. Louis Cardinals to a 3-0 triumph over the Chicago Cubs. A scheduled second game got no further than the last half of the first inning.

Graduation Takes Big Toll Fremont Here Wednesday Sports Stars Service-Bound

By LOREN W. TIBBALS
Marion Star Sports Editor

Graduation services at both Marion Harding and St. Mary High schools last week, climaxed brilliant careers of a score or more topflight high school performers whose uncanny ability has dazed hundreds of scholastic sport patrons for the past three or four years.

Their departure from the schoolboy ranks finds coaches at both schools facing the necessity of finding new recruits—youths who will be able to react similar to their predecessors. Regarded as mere boys now, the youths who will perform on the scholastic scene tomorrow may even eclipse those who came before them.

Hoping for the best, head coaches at both schools are going ahead with plans for a full athletic program despite unusually heavy losses to graduation and even greater setbacks in the form of war rationing programs.

Lack of tires, possible nation-wide gasoline rationing, legislation against the use of school busses for transporting high school groups to athletic contests all will figure in next year's high school athletic woes.

While graduation losses at Harding High school are unusually high as far as the athletic scope is concerned, other athletic teams in the North Central Ohio circuit will not be affected to any great exent. In fact at least one, and possibly a second school, is depending on their rookies to raise their status in the N. C. O. league.

Ashland's Hilltoppers are expected to offer Bill Williams' football charges the greatest opposition and are choices of several long-time observers as successors to the Presidents as league champions.

Mt. Vernon's Yellow Jackets, always contenders for the loop basketball laurels, are again tagged world beaters by the Mt. Vernon press, but hardly seem capable of capturing even the N. C. O. flag.

Track is definitely in for a bad season next year as far as the six league teams are concerned. Performers as a whole are below par and with the league meet out for the duration the sport's main objective will undoubtedly continue to be only a conditioner for football.

In conclusion we dedicate this small effort to those who in the past few years have brought unprecedented sucess to athletic teams of both Harding and St. Mary. May their successors be as efficient.

LEAGUE LEADERS HERE

Fremont's fast-stepping team which is currently leading the Ohio semi-pro league is composed almost entirely of former Ohio State Class D ball players. They will appear here Wednesday night at Lincoln park in the first of a two-game series with the lowly Marion Hawks.

SERVICE BOUND

Baseball-wise John Paulus and Ray Robbins, both members of the Marion Hawks, will soon trade their diamond rigs for coast guard uniforms. Wednesday's game with the Fremont outfit will probably be their last with the Hawks.

COLUMBUS DEFEATS TOLEDO BY 7-2 COUNT

Minneapolis Wins 2, To Land in Third Place.

By The Associated Press

The big holiday week-end in the American association saw the Minneapolis Millers move into a challenging position. They won two pitching duels with St. Paul Sunday, 2-1 and 3-1 to total up four victories out of five against the Saints this season. The win put them in third place.

Kansas City rallied Milwaukee 6-5. The second game was called in the third with the score 1-all.

Louisville humiliated Indianapolis, 15-1 and 11-3. Columbus whipped Toledo, 7-2, but the nightcap was called in the second with the Hens leading, 4-0.

BUCKEYES CHECK WOLVERINES HOPES

Cheat Michigan Out of Title in Baseball Race.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, June 1—Michigan fell short of wrapping up its second Big Ten baseball championship and settled in a tie for it with Iowa.

Credit for changing Michigan's destiny largely belongs to Ohio State. The Buckeyes in a 3-2 Friday triumph knocked the Wolverines out of a chace to repeat for the pennant.

Michigan beat Ohio State, 7-1, Saturday and thus salvaged a co-championship. The Hawkeyes and Wolverines closed their books with 10 wins and two losses.

Wisconsin was dropped from the running when Minnesota captured a double-header, 3-1 and 6-1, Saturday. The Badgers can take third place this week-end at Madison if they sweep the season's final two-game series from Ohio State. Both schools have six wins in 10 games.

WEEK-END SPORTS IN BRIEF

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Dr. Theodore Schmidt, last president of the Australian olympic committee, told interviewers he believed the games would not be revived after the present war "even if there are some nations left."

SEATTLE, Wash.—Never taking less than third place in the events in which they competed, the University of Southern California runners won their seventh consecutive Pacific Coast conference track crown. They compiled 79 points to 43½ for second-place California.

NEW YORK — Barney Ewel, Penn State athlete, won both sprints and broad jump crown for third straight year to give Nittany Lions their first outdoor IC-4A track title. Leslie MacMitchell won mile but lost half-mile crown while Al Blozis of Georgetown annexed the shot and discus laurels.

BUCKS WIN OHIO A.A.U. MEET

BEREA, O., June 1—Ohio State university's Western Conference track champions had little trouble in sweeping the Ohio A. A. U. crown Saturday night. Led by Captain Ralph Hammond and Bob Wright, the team piled up 150 points, 50 more than second-place Miami. Baldwin-Wallace finished third with 37 points. Toledo fourth with 18 and Ohio university fifth with 14.

AIR RAIDS

cance lay for the British in the vision it raised of more, and worse, to come for the enemy.

Prime Minister Churchill himself pictured the attack as part of a master strategy rather than an isolated achievement.

He told the fliers in a message of congratulation that their work was "proof of the growing power of the British bomber forces," and also "a herald of what Germany will receive, city by city, from now on."

The British radio told the German people it was but "the first step" and reminded them that "the Yanks are coming" to add their might to Britain's bombing strength.

Some United States air officers flew as observers in the raid.

Well-informed experts agreed that a succession of such raids, increasing in scale as United States air forces become available, might bring Germany to her knees by autumn.

This echoed a recent contention of Air Marshal A. T. Harris, chief of the RAF bomber command, that "if I could send 1,000 bombers over Germany every night it would end the war by autumn."

Some British air authorities have contended that bombing alone is insufficient to win the war but there is reason to believe that the government and the air council have chosen it as the best method of punishing the Germans until ships are available to transport an allied expeditionary force to the continent.

Aviation sources said future operations probably would try to erase cities as yet undamaged by the RAF, as well as to complete the destruction of such already-battered centers as Kiel, Mannheim and Muenster.

Although Britons have learned to expect the Nazis to strike back swiftly and forcefully after such raids, the only counter-blow was a pre-dawn attack on a southeastern town today.

A communique said there were some casualties and damage in the town, but there was no indication that the attack was on a large scale.

Hitler's Strength Put To Full Test On Many Fronts

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
Wide World War Analyst

The allies very definitely are getting ahead with their job of tapping Herr Hitler to learn the measure of his girth.

Most impressive proof of this rests in the revelation of air power in the record British bombing raid by some 1,250 warplanes which laid waste to a large area of the ancient Rhenish city of Cologne—a really terrifying exhibition.

British Premier Churchill called it "a herald of what Germany will receive, city by city." This statement acquires added significance through the announcement today in London by Lieut. General Henry Arnold, head of the United States air forces, that he has practically completed plans with British leaders to develop "the maximum impact of our combined air strength" on Germany.

The curtain has been drawn aside to give us a glimpse of an allied air fleet which is developing into a force that nothing on earth will be able to withstand. We may in due course be able to blast Hitler's Germany off the map.

Russia Still Important

Still, we shouldn't let this spectacular event obscure the momentous development on the Russian front. The struggle for the main gateway to the golden Caucasus, upon which the outcome of the war depends to such large degree, appears to have reached a lull marking the end of the first stage of this Armageddon, with the advantage resting on the allied side.

The Hitlerites have suffered no overwhelming defeat along the great Kharkov-Rostov sector. But the fact the Nazis haven't been able to get ahead with their project of breaking through is in itself a serious setback. Every day they are kept away from badly needed oil and other fresh supplies is another nail in the fuehrer's coffin. So long as the Germans aren't actually advancing they are taking a beating.

However, we shouldn't assume that the present slackening off in the battle means it's dying out. Offensive and counter-offensive will intensify as the summer progresses, and the fertile fields of this sector will run with the blood of a vast host of youth before the issue is decided.

Other Course Possible

This doesn't necessarily mean that Hitler will devote all his energy to trying to break through the Rostov gateway. It's quite possible he may attempt an assault by air and sea against Syria in an effort to break into the oil fields of the Middle East.

This finds support in the new offensive attempted by Nazi Marshal Rommel across the blazing summer sands of the Libyan desert. Such an action undoubtedly would accompany any German drive against Syria.

It's likely that upon Rommel's progress will depend Hitler's procedure in the Middle East. Should things seem favorable to the axis in the desert warfare, it might encourage an invasion of Syria, thus not only threatening the oil fields of Iraq and Iran but putting Egypt and the Suez canal in a pair of pincers.

Marshal Rommel appears from British accounts to have taken a bad battering thus far in the five-day-old engagement—thanks to allied air superiority—and Rommel's master may well be twiddling his thumbs in exasperation over his incompleted plans for new adventures. However, the battle still rages fiercely and while Rommel appears to be in a tight spot he is one of the great soldiers of our time. The British are cautious in their optimism as regards the outcome, and we should be, too.

MILD BIDDING HELPS STOCKS

Smashing Air Raid on Cologne Acts as Cheering Influence on Market.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, June 1—Mild bidding, apparently inspired partly by more cheering week-end war developments, put selective props under today's stock market.

Gains of fractions to a point or so were well in the majority at the start but dealings slowed and prices wavered in many cases.

Wall Street spirits seemingly were lifted a trifle on the idea that the big Cologne air raid was an opening drive to smash the Nazis in the west. Buyers still leaned to conservatism, however, pending clarification of the tax program and other economic shifts.

Among stocks Chrysler and Montgomery Ward made new highs for 1942 before displaying slipping tendencies. Supported at one time or another were Bethlehem, Sears Roebuck, American Airlinese, Westinghouse, Anaconda, U. S. Gypsum and American Telephone.

Rails and utilities did virtually nothing. U. S. Steel, General Motors, Chesapeake & Ohio and Southern Pacific backed away.

ALL GRAIN FUTURES FALL SHARPLY TODAY

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, June 1—Mediate uncertainties, lack of demand, excellent crop prospects, shortage of storage facilities and pending farm legislation combined today to force all grain futures prices sharply lower, in several instances to new low seasonal levels.

All deliveries of wheat lost more than 2 cents just before the close on renewed activity by sellers. Weakness of cotton futures also was a factor. There were reports of selling here which was regarded as against purchases at Minneapolis.

7 DIE AS WAVE HITS SHORE OF LAKE ERIE

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, June 1 — The Lake Erie shore counted seven dead today from the sudden sweep of a water wall, described at one point as 15 to 20 feet high, which plunged against night fishing parties in a 60-mile stretch of the lakefront.

At least seven others were injured and hospitalized.

A sudden shift in wind direction was the major cause of the huge wave, the Cleveland weather bureau reported. One witness said a smaller crest followed later.

Those drowned when the wall of water struck about 2:15 a. m. Sunday, as all-night fishermen were bent on their holiday weekend sport, were:

Merle Edward Diehl, 45; Orlo Lenney, 29, and Lenney's wife, Esther, 25, all of Cortland, O., who were fishing from a small boat at Day'son-the-Lake, near Geneva.

Merrill F. Riley, 50, of Cleveland, fishing from another small boat at the same location.

Mrs. Esther Allen, 48, and George H. Forrler, 44, both of Berea, O., caught by the wave on a pier at Bay village, west of Cleveland.

Robert Michaels, 14, of Cleveland, swept off a jetty at Perkins Beach, Cleveland.

John Austin of Wooster, O., Riley's brother-in-law and companion, said "there was a slight swell followed by a strong undertow. The next thing I knew a wall of water about 15 or 20 feet crashed down on us, overturning our boat. I never saw Riley alive again.

NEW LABOR PLAN EFFECTIVE TODAY

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 1—The labor mobilization program of the war manpower commission became effective today, establishing an emphatic policy for military deferment of irreplaceable craftsmen and setting up a system of priorities to make certain that urgent production needs get first call on available skilled workers.

"This is a great opportunity," said Administrator Paul V. McNutt, "for a democracy to demonstrate that it can discipline itself."

The manpower chief directed on May 21, that the selective service system instruct local draft boards, effective June 1, to consult with federal employment service offices before calling to the army any individual "skilled in a critical war occupation."

Selective service previously had adopted a policy for deferment of men in critical occupations, but McNutt said some draft boards seemed "to regard it as a breach of patriotism to defer anybody for occupational reasons." Hence, the federal government offices were brought into the picture to help the local boards determine those men needed most urgently at work benches.

The war production board is classifying war plants and the federal employment service will "make preferential referrals of workers to employers engaged in war production."

The manpower program effective today directed also that the farm security administration "increase the number of mobile labor camps in order to make available workers in agriculture to achieve the food for victory' objective.

No Curious To Pass Bier of Barrymore

By The Associated Press

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., June 1—John Barrymore, who in life loved crowds and laughter and gaiety, will make his last appearance Tuesday in semiobscurity when a few old friends assemble to pay him final honors in a serene setting symbolic of the peace he found in his dying hours Friday.

In the secluded little chapel of Calvary Cemetery a requiem mass will be pronounced at 11 a. m. for the veteran actor by Father John O'Donnell, his long-time friend who administered the final Catholic rites to Barrymore when he returned to the faith of his childhood shortly before his death.

The chapel will accommodate only about 75, but that will be ample for his immediate [illegible] Don W. La Vay, [illegible] of the family and an executor of Barrymore's will. [illegible] by invitation only, [illegible] will be no room for [illegible] curious.

Removal of Tonsils

The time of year is rapidly approaching when the summer vacation will rob Johnny and Mabel of their last excuse for not having their tonsils out.

Arguments go pro and con about whether tonsils should be removed and I am frequently dragged into these discussions, but I have no fixed opinion on the subject. The only thing I am certain of is that no general rule can be laid down and each case must be judged on its own merits.

I do not believe that all tonsils should be removed from children before they reach the age of ten years, although I have heard this opinion expressed. Nor do I believe that tonsils should not be removed at all. Plenty of people get along in perfect health without tonsils.

In fact, our knowledge about the function of tonsils is very limited. I've just been trying to find out in several textbooks on the Nose and Throat what the functions of the tonsils are and everyone concludes by agreeing that they do not know. Only a few facts stand out. One is that the tonsils are lymph-like structures related to the lymphatics elsewhere in the body, that they form a ring of tissue all around the back of the throat.

The other members of the ring are the adenoids, the lingual tonsil at the base of the tongue. Another positive fact is that the tonsils are very large in infancy and childhood and tend to become smaller as time goes on. Therefore, tonsils which would be perfectly normal in a child of two or three years are definitely abnormal in a person of fifteen to twenty. Large tonsils in later years usually mean that they have become the seat of infection. In that case they should be removed.

The tonsils certainly serve some function in stopping infections on the outposts of the body and naturally they are subject to attacks of acute tonsilitis which may turn into chronic infection so that at the age of ten to fifteen years it is probable that the tonsil has outlived its usefulness and is doing more harm as a harbor of infection than good.

It is valuable to consider why tonsils were taken out and what results occurred. According to some recent figures, the commonest causes for removal were:

Frequent colds—One year after operation 90 per cent of these cases were improved.

Frequent Sore Throat — One year after operation 86 per cent of these patients were improved.

Mouth breathing—One year after operation 93 per cent of these were improved.

Enlarged glands in the neck—Improvement occurred in about 40 per cent of cases.

Ear trouble—Improvement occurred in about 50 per cent of cases.

Rheumatism—Improvement occurred in less than 1 per cent of cases in children and in about 30 per cent in the joint pains of adults.

Such are the facts and the elements on which one has to decide whether or not tonsils should be removed.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A.C.W.—Can one use too much salt in the diet? I have been told that salt causes hardening of the arteries in people of 50 years or more.

Answer: This is an old superstition that has been given up by all scientific nutritionists. Salt is restricted in the diet only when the kidneys will not eliminate it. The body needs a certain amount of salt every day and nature provides for throwing off the excess. It does not cause hardening of the arteries.

Pitfalls of Love

By ADELE GARRISON

Ronald Promises Madge to Keep Jack Bickett's Secret, Then Spencer Tells Her Jack Wants to See Her.

RONALD'S FACE, at my announcement, mirrored the "blank astonishment" so beloved by story writers. He fairly goggled at me.

"I never saw him," he said, "but I've heard him talked about, and there were only three men who went out of here with your father. Dr. Twitchell, who couldn't be Bickett; Professor Diswell, who is too old, and that other awful looking man. He's the only one of the right age, unless—that man who called himself Jim Watson, and left here just now?"

I shook my head in smiling negation.

"No, Ronald, Jim Watson is himself. The man who calls himself 'Charles' and poses as Professor Diswell's servant is my cousin, Jack Bickett."

"No!" Ronald gasped.

"Yes," I returned emphatically, smiling at him, but with a troublesome doubt deep within me. Had I been wise in betraying the identity of my cousin?

Secret Must Be Kept

The next instant I speciously salved my conscience with the reflection that I was not betraying Jack's confidence. I had discovered his identity and he had protested that I was mistaken.

"Now that you know this, Ronald," I said gravely, "I must caution you against betraying, even by the lift of an eyebrow, that you know Jack Bickett's identity or whereabouts."

"I shall be very careful," Ronald said earnestly. "I realize what is at stake in all this.

"Only—what can I do to help?"

"First," I told him, "to 'possess your soul in patience.' You feel reasonably assured now, don't you, of Marion's present safety?"

"As long as they can't find Jack Bickett?" he queried.

"Exactly," I told him. "And as for yourself, I imagine my father will wish to keep you near him, to use as a sort of errand boy."

"I can scrub floors or wash dishes," he declared. "I'm going to put myself at your father's beck and call in everything I do. But if there's anything you can tell me from time to time, you will, won't you?"

"You shall have every crumb of information I get myself."

"That is all I want," Ronald said emphatically.

"And now," I said briskly, "tell me about Carolyn."

"There isn't anything to tell since last night," he said. "She was very quiet and docile, hardly spoke a dozen words, and, as you know, I left the car at the first station beyond Dalemont and came on to New York. Uncle Dicky will have more news of her, I fancy. When does he get in?"

"Not until very late tonight," I answered. "You are to be in bed long before then, for you need all the rest you can get."

"Very well," he said docilely.

And then I heard someone come into the next room, carefully locking the other room door behind him. The next minute my father appeared in the doorway.

"Professor Diswell," I said, "Charles is very anxious to speak to you, Margaret, about his matter. Have you time to see him now?"

• • •

"Yes, I can see him, now," I told my father. "Ronald and I have just finished our talk."

Ronald had risen and my father smiled at him.

"If you'll just come with me," he said, "we'll leave your aunt Madge to her interview with Charles."

They went to the door, and my father turned back to say, "It's all right, Charles told me all about it."

He went out of the room without waiting for my answer, but I knew what he meant. Jack had revealed his identity to him, but I did not think he had said anything about the problem he faced with Katharine.

I waited tensely for Jack's arrival. Just before he entered I heard my father's low voice from outside.

"You don't mind if I lock this door," he said. "When you have finished your interview, knock loudly here and I will come back."

"All right," I heard Jack say. Then he came rapidly across the outer room and stopped just inside the door of the room in which I sat.

"Come over here and sit down, Jack," I said, trying to keep down my repulsion at his atrocious disguise as a hill-billy farmhand, with unkempt hair and beard.

"I can't blame you," he said suddenly, and I remembered how he always had been able to read my thoughts. "I look an awful mess. I was strongly tempted to get 'all shaven and shorn,' but I don't care. Except for your keen eyes and your father's, my disguise has passed muster so far, or at least I think it has. Perhaps I've been wrong, too, about some of the others—the ones I really want to fool."

Cheered Up by Madge

My conscience suddenly smote me. To have gotten even with what I deemed his irritating cocksureness was one thing. To have deflated him to the point of doubt and questioning was another.

"Will it make you feel better" I asked a bit shamefacedly, "if I tell you that Father did not recognize you until I had given him a clue by saying I had something important to tell him after he had asked who you were? His intuition did the rest. But he probably slurred that part of it when he talked to you."

"Well, he didn't stress it," he admitted, with a twitching at the corners of his mouth. Then he added ruefully: "But I didn't fool you."

Tells How She Found Out

"But you did," I told him just as ruefully. "I told you an awful tarradiddle, Jack. I couldn't help it. You were so subtly insulting when you said, 'The name is Mrs. Graham, I believe,' or words to that effect, that I couldn't help trying to take you down a peg."

"You did, all right," Jack said. He was visibly cheered, however, by the knowledge that I had not penetrated his disguise at first sight. "But, if you didn't know me then, how did you find out?"

"Partly by the way you guessed"—I tapped the telephone—"and when I heard that you had identified yourself to Professor Diswell as 'Shawn Rue' I knew beyond doubt who you were."

"But," I went on hastily, before he could make any comment, "I was prepared for the discovery by a bit of snooping I had done when alone in Professor Diswell's house."

He fixed suddenly quickened eyes upon me, as I opened my purse and took from it the carved ivory cube which my mother long ago had given him as a watch fob charm.

"I am not particularly proud of getting this, Jack," I said, as I held it out to him. "But actually it seemed as if something outside of myself drew me to that inner room, and led me to find the hidden compartment in its floor."

His fingers were trembling as he took the trinket from me.

"I am sorry you did get it," he said. "I left it there because I wanted no clue to my identity on me. I had instructed Professor Diswell to destroy it if anything happened to me. I could not bear to crush it into bits myself."

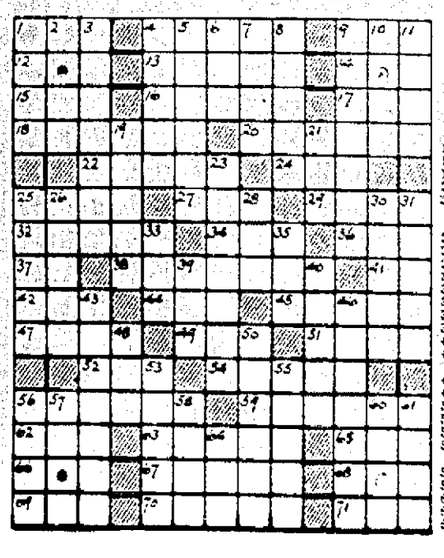
Solution Of Yesterday's Puzzle



In order to maintain continuity in "Toots and Casper" both Saturday's and today's strips appear today, and "Bringing Up Father" is omitted. Publication of "Bringing Up Father" will be resumed tomorrow. Double use of "Toots and Casper" is necessitated by the Memorial Day holiday when no Star was published.
